

The greened corridors are paths for pedestrians and cyclists lined with trees and biologically complex hedges that meander throughout Lochau. In a limited area and using few resources, these paths create a variety of connections, particularly between and along generous green spaces. In doing so, they tie in with the existing surrounding, and by providing shade together coupled with water retention measures ensure a pleasant climate. These interwoven paths accompany people between the shore of Lake Constance and the town center as in cross direction.
